Remington is a 10-year-old who is allergic to all food. His only form of nourishment is a liquid nutrition drink. He is lucky in the fact that other children with this disease are tube fed. The disease is called Eosinophilic (e-o-sin-o-fil-ik) Esophagitis. Currently, there is no cure. We have partnered with the American Partnership for Eosinophilic Disorders non-profit organization to change this outcome. APFED believes in educating the public and medical community about this disease and funding research for a cure. We realize there may not be a cure in Remington's lifetime, but we will have made a difference for those to come who face this same disease. To learn more you may visit www.apfed.org.

A message from the Walls Family:

Our belief is that every person can make a difference in this world by making the path for others easier. Remington has this disease for a reason so our family has chosen to participate in life and not be bystanders. We will make a difference in honor of him! Thank you in advance for your support!
